From the Amst. Gazette, dated Oct. 25.

Grodno, October 5.

THE 3d Instant being fix'd for opening the Assembly of the General Diet, the King went in the Morning to the Parish Church, being attended by his Life-Guards, and accompanied by the Senators, the Ministers of State, the Officers of the Crown and the great Duchy of Lithuania, and all the Nuncio's and Deputies. The Bishop of Smolensko having said Mass, the Archdeacon of Russia preach'd a Sermon upon these Words of Isaiah, Fear not, my Servant; I will pour my Spirit upon thy Posterity, and my Blessing upon those of thy Off-spring. After divine Service, all the Nuncio's went to the Chamber of the Deputies of the Nobility, and each having taken his Place according to his Rank, M. Leduchowski, Nuncio of the Palatinate of Volhinia, and Marshal of the preceding Diet held at Warsaw, opened this by a fine Speech, which he ended with asking if they would begin by the Election of a Marshal, according to Law and Custom. Whereupon some Nuncio's answered, That by Virtue of their Instructions they were oblig'd to insist upon the Retreat of the Russians, before they began to debate upon that Election; the rather, because the Laws, and the Dignity of the Republick, permit not that any Deliberations be enter'd into while Foreign Troops sojourn in the Kingdom: And therefore, they are of Opinion, that before all things, a Deputation should be made from their Assembly, to desire the King to procure the necessary Succours upon that Occasion. The other Nuncio's, tho' charg'd with like instructions, were of Opinion, that they should proceed immediately to the Election of a Marshal; which was carried by Plurality of Voices. After some Debates, it was also agreed, that the Marshal shall be of Lithuania. M. Szembek, first Nuncio of the Palatinate of Cracow, gave his Vote for the Count de Zawisza, Starost of Minski; but a Gentleman who was not a Nuncio, protested immediately against that Choice, and was seconded by the Count de Denhoff, Sword-bearer of the Crown, Lesser General of Lithuania, and Nuncio of the Duchy of Samogitia, which gave Occasion to many Debates. That Count was desir'd to desist from his Opposition, and engage the other Gentleman to do the same; and even the King sent for him to speak with him about it, but before he went to his Majesty, he enter'd a Protest against all that should be done in his Absence, except against the Separation of the Assembly: Nevertheless at his Return he complied with the Solicitations that had been made to him. As for the other Gentleman, he persisted in the Opposition, and even renew'd it after four other Nuncio's of the Palatinate of Cracow had given their Votes in Favour of Count Zawisza: Whereupon they adjourn'd the Session till the next Day. On the 4th, M. Leduchowski having demanded of the Assembly, if they should continue to collect the Votes for the Election of a Marshal, it was unanimously agreed to, and the 6th Nuncio of Cracow gave his Vote for the Count de Zawisza, upon Condition, 1. That after the Election of a Marshal, they should consider, before all things, upon the Departure of the Russian Troops. 2. That they should examine who it was that were the Authors of the Return of the Russians into the Kingdom. 3. That the Demands made at Reussen to Prince Dolborucki, the Czar's Ambassador, be read. When M. Poniatowski, Nuncio of Veilun, would have given his Vote, he was hinder'd by an Ecclesiastick, upon Pretence that he was not a Catholic: But the Count de Denhoff took the Part of that Nuncio, by Virtue of his Instructions, according to which, he was oblig'd to maintain the Rights of the Non-Catholicks. Whereupon so great Debates arose, that the Nuncio of Veilun, for preventing the ill Consequences, and for Love of Peace, consented that his Vote should not be taken. A Calm being thereby establish'd, they continued to collect the Votes, and the Majority was found to fall upon the Count de Zawisza, to whom M. Leduchowski immediately surrender'd the Battoon of Marshal. That Count, after having taken the usual Oath, propos'd that his Election should be communicated to the King, according to ancient Usage; which was done accordingly by three Deputies of the Chamber of Nuncio's, who were named for that purpose. The Assembly afterwards adjourn'd to the next Day.

Paris, Oct. 17. On Thursday Count Conigleck and the Earl of Stairs had a long Conference with the Abbot du Bois, who had one Yesterday with the Pope's Nuncio. The same Day the Council of the Regency assembled upon the Affair of the Finances, wherein the Departements of the several Members of it were resolv'd upon. We hear that the Inhabitants of Navarre have abolish'd the new Customs, in Example of those of Biscay; and that the Magistrates of Pampelune have sent Remonstrances to Madrid, to demand the Re-establishment of their ancient Privileges, and to declare that they will defend themselves if Troops be sent against them. The same Fire is lighting in Arragon. 'Tis said on the other side, that the Court of Madrid has granted an Amnesty to those of Biscay. Cardinal Alberoni has sent Commissions to several Foreign Countries to buy Ships ready fitted out.

The Council being assembled the next Day at the Louvre, M. the Counsellors of State, oppos'd that Choice, pretending that it is injurious to their Dignity.
